

Sabin Lessard, Université de Montréal
Probability of fixation and evolution of cooperation

Abstract :

The first-order effect of selection on the probability of fixation of a mutant type in a population of fixed finite size will be expressed in terms of expected coalescence times under neutrality. This will be applied to the evolution of cooperation from a game-theoretic perspective. The effects of population subdivision will be addressed in the framework of an island model. Variants and extensions will be discussed.